The vessel was bound from Singapore to Jeddah. The Jeddah belonged to the Singapore Steamship Company. She was built at Dumbarton, Scotland, and was an iron screw steamer, 280 feet long, with a net tonnage of 993 and gross 1,541."

DENVER, Col., August 11.—A Santa Fe dispatch says: "Colonel Grierson, by a forced march, August 5th, of sixty-five miles in twenty-one hours, headed off the Indians on their way North, and on the 6th repulsed several of their advances without loss, near Rattlesnake Springs. The Indians lost heavily; canons are guarded and they can get no water.

All a Mistake.

LONDON, August 11.—A Bombay dispatch says news has been received from Chaman Choki of as late a date as Monday. This disposes of the rumors of the disaster received from that quarter on Tuesday.

Fire.

MIDNIGHT REPORTS.

Georgia Politics.

ATLANTA, GA., August 11.—The Democratic State Convention this morning nominated Clifford Anderson, of Bibb county, for Attorney-General; D. N. Speer, of Troup county, for Treasurer; Wm. A. Wright, of Richmond county, for Comptroller; and U. C. Barnett, of Baldwin county, for Secretary of State.

The Gubernatorial Convention adjourned to-day. The minority of the Convention called a meeting for to-night and they will issue an address to the people of the State.

The Republican State Central Committee has called the State Convention to meet in Atlanta September 7th to nominate a State and Electoral ticket.

The American Dental Association.

NEW YORK, August 11.—The American Dental Association this morning received the members of the Southern Dental Convention at Republican Hall, the latter marching in a body under an escort of Drs. Smith, Mills and Townsend. Dr. Patrick of South Carolina, President of the Southern Association Convention, was formally presented to the presiding officer, Dr. Jno. Allen and the latter called upon Dr. Ambler for an address of welcome. The address breathed a fraternal spirit and was heartily applauded. Dr. Turner of Raleigh, N. C., replied in a similar strain. After some routine business the Joint Convention went into session.

Damages from Rain.

WILMINGTON, August 11.—A heavy rain fell throughout this section last night and to-day, and still continues falling. Planters and others here from several neighboring counties to-day say the cotton prospect has materially changed within the past week, some estimating the damage to the crops as high as 50 per cent.

Republican Convention.

HARTFORD, CONN., August 11.—The Republican State Convention organized to-day by the election of Hon. Augustus Brandagee, of New London, as President. After the usual routine of business, the Convention proceeded to ballot for Governor. When two ballots had been taken without a choice, a motion was made and carried to nominate H. B. Bigelow, of New Haven, by acclamation. General W. H. Buckley, of New Haven, was then nominated, also by acclamation, for Lieutenant-Governor, when the Convention took a recess.

Steamboat Explosion.

NEW ORLEANS, August 11.—The steamboat Bonnie Lee, hence Saturday for Red River, with two hundred and fifty tons of assorted merchandise, blew up and sunk Monday evening at Lone-wall landing. Jeff. Percy, second clerk, was killed, and a little son of Mr. McDermot is missing. The boat is a total loss. She was valued at $15,000, and insured in Cincinnati for $9,000. The value of her cargo is unknown.

Alabama Democrats.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., August 11.—The Democratic Convention, to nominate a Congressional candidate for this (Second) District, met at Greenville yesterday. A large number of ballots were taken and the Convention adjourned until to-morrow. This evening H. A. Herbert, Esq., the present representative, was nominated by acclamation. Messrs. The Eastern Troubles.

LONDON, August 11.—A dispatch from Quetta says: Candahar is surrounded by large numbers of Tribesmen who do their utmost to intercept letters, rendering communication with the garrison very difficult. It is possible that an attack is meditated on Chaman Choki, as Ayoob Khan is reported to have detached troops who are going in that direction.

Suicide.

MARION, MISS., August 11.—John B. Buck, census enumerator, committed suicide here to-day by drowning himself.

SCHOOLS.
Virginia Military Institute,
LEXINGTON, VIRGINIA.
Session Opens 1st September.
The Report of the Special Board of Examiners for 1875 closes thus:—
In conclusion, your Committee cannot too highly commend what has seemed to them the marked and distinguishing features of this Institution, the happy combination of the military system of instruction with the departments of science and of literary culture, and the more ennobling culture of the heart and soul. Nowhere else have we seen this combination so complete and perfect. We cannot speak of it too highly. It is such a system as fits a pupil for life and for death. Under its guidance he is sure to tread always the path of duty, virtue and honor.

THE STATE CANVASS.

Jarvis and Buxton at Smithfield.

THE GENERAL AND HIS A. Q. M.

Yesterday the candidates for Governor met at Smithfield, Johnston county. A smaller crowd was in attendance than was expected, not more than five hundred people being on the ground. This was due in great measure to the fact that the Neuse is not yet crossable.

GOVERNOR JARVIS

spoke first, being introduced by E. S. Abell, Esq., the Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of the county. The Governor spoke at full length, making the strong points heretofore reported in THE NEWS. This being the residence of E. W. Pou, Esq., who wrote sundry letters on which Judge Buxton pretends to have based charges against Governor Jarvis in relation to the Special Tax Bonds, the Governor took occasion to spike that gun, or rather to turn it against its original owner. He stated fully his whole record and history in connection with the legislation of 1868 and 1869, and in particular said that he told Mr. Pou beforehand he intended to vote in favor of the bill in order to move a reconsideration. Mr. Pou stated that he recollected perfectly everything stated by the Governor which occurred after January, 1869; that of the matters before that date his memory was not clear, but he would not say that the Governor's statement was not entirely accurate. Later in the day Mr. Pou stated voluntarily that "any charge reflecting on the honesty or integrity of Governor Jarvis was contemptible and false;" that he had known him, had been in the Legislature with him, and they had fought the Special Tax Bonds together.

JUDGE BUXTON

spoke next, but there was so little enthusiasm for him even among the darkies that he did not fill out his time. He bungled, as usual, over the questions asked by Gov. Jarvis, but made no reference to special tax bonds this time. There seems to be a general and growing opinion in the Judge's own party that as a candidate for Governor he is by no means a success, and some of his friends speak of taking him away from the castigations so unsparingly administered to him by Gov. Jarvis whenever they meet. As for the Governor, it is possible that he may not be "eloquent," and he does make a calm business-like speech without any effort to create excitement, but somehow he made his audience at Smithfield and last night they were offering to bet on his election by majorities all the way from 25,000 to 40,000.

WILDLY ENTHUSIASTIC,

THE CONGRESSIONAL CANDIDATES

were on the ground also. At the close of the speeches of the State candidates, General Cox was loudly called for but he explained that it was Mr. Bledsoe's turn to fire first and so the crowd reluctantly consented to hear the ex-Quarter-master. Mr. Bledsoe made his regular howling harangue. It was never worth reporting, and having been reported twice we spare our readers a repetition. He did make one statement worthy of note. It was that he was the only farmer who was ever a candidate for Congress in North Carolina. His other statements were nearly as accurate as this, and may be dismissed as his hearers dismissed them, without further notice.

GENERAL COX

looked splendidly when he rose to reply. Johnston county is one of his strongholds and he felt like McGregor with his foot on his native heath. Gen. Cox said that even were his opponent fit to represent the district in Congress, his utter want of stability would disqualify him. He charged that in 1868 Mr. Bledsoe, in a speech in Panther Branch township, advised the white people not to sell or rent land to negroes, as the negroes would thus be forced to take such wages as the farmers chose to give them, and he proved the charge by a certificate from six of the best men of Wake county. Gen. Cox also took occasion to explain the "Hold Robeson" telegram. He said that this telegram was sent to Col. W. F. French, a private gentleman of the highest integrity, and was sent after he learned that telegrams had been sent by the Republicans for the purpose of influencing the Commissioners. That his telegram was not sent to any official, and was not intended to have, did not have and could not have had any influence on any official's action.

The Johnston people say that they will give Gen. Cox 1,000 majority, and it does look that way.

Mr. Bledsoe is worse hacked than he was when he came back from Chatham, and, unlike the Judge, who grins and bears it, he can't smile under the infliction.

The waters were so high that it was impossible for the candidates to go to Lillington, and so they came on to Raleigh, whence they will go to Fayetteville Saturday.

IF OUR Yankee brethren ever stopped to think about the things at the South of which knowing nothing they talk so glibly, they would save themselves many a blunder and the country much injurious strife. They ought to have known, calculating people as they are, that the census would show just such results as it has shown at the South. The statistics of our great Southern staple are made up in New York, which owes to it much of the wealth and population there congregated. The cotton crop of 1870, as made up in New York, was 3,154,946 bales. That of the last cotton year was 5,073,531 bales. Even a Yankee, who knows nothing of cotton planting, ought to be able to calculate that two million extra bales of cotton, worth say $100,000,000, could not have been made without extra labor. Yet the South made it last year, and in addition to this immense production a vastly larger area of land was cultivated for food than ever before. The New England farmer knows that it takes work to make crops and men to work, and so knowing, when the Tribune and the Times tell him that the census is a lie and its takers are frauds, ought also to think a minute and see as he would that the lie and the fraud are neither with the census nor the men who have taken it. Good government, good laws and the certainty of their administration, the knowledge that life and property are safe, and that what a man makes he will be permitted to enjoy, have made a wonderful change in the South since 1876. There was nothing left to steal when the carpet-bagger left the South. There is plenty here now, but under Democratic home rule he could steal nothing if he returned.

THE NEW YORK Tribune is once more in distress about the Southern negroes who are not allowed to call their souls their own, and promises them aid from the Northern Republicans so long as "the Southern State governments remain in the hands of rulers who will neither stop these outrages themselves nor call upon the General Government to interfere." Better look at home. The liberty allowed the Southern negro at the South almost amounts to license; when he goes North, he does not fare so well. Here for instance is the Virginia negro, JOHN H. HARRIS, a Democrat, who is having a distressing time in the Tribune's immediate neighborhood, without interference by either State or Federal government, or complaint from the Tribune. He has made several attempts to unload himself of a speech, but every time he has met some contrary sentiment in the form of stones or over-ripe eggs. He was driven out of Wilmington, Delaware, a few days ago, and on Saturday he turned up in Chester, where it is reported he spent a large part of his time dodging an indignant crowd of Republican colored men, who had been supplied with whisky and eggs for the occasion.

IN 1869, RADICAL legislation, that is to say, wages and mileage of legislators, cost the people of this State $191,102.10, and nearly a million of dollars in taxes was the result of it. In 1879, Democratic legislators cost the people only $53,598.10, and spent only half a million. In 1870, Radical legislators used up in per diem and mileage $161,431.70 and spent more than a million of money. In 1880, the cost of a Democratic legislature, which did the best work ever done for the State, was but $17,695.70. In 1869 and 1870 the people were plundered at the State Capital and at the county-seats, and no man was assured of protection to life or property or the possession of the products of his labor. In 1879 and 1880 there is no stealing of the people's money either at Raleigh or in the counties, the law is once more enforced, and men work with a will because they know their lives are safe while at work and the enjoyment of its products assured. There is a difference between Democracy and Radicalism, a difference worth being excited about, speaking about, writing about, voting about.

THERE ARE NEARLY fifty millions of people in the United States. There are in Massachusetts and Rhode Island and New York about a dozen blanket factories. To enable these factories to compete with foreign factories, a tariff duty averaging 90 per cent. is levied on all imported blankets, under the plea of raising money to support the Government. The result of the duty was that last year we imported $1,453.72 worth of blankets and paid $1,233.83 of tax on them to the Government. We used $20,000,000 worth of blankets averaging $5 a pair. The price would have been $3 but for the tax, which put $8,000,000 of the people's money into the pockets of a dozen blanket manufacturers. Is it not time to think of the fifty millions of people? Would it not be good policy to pay the factory people the $6,000,000 to shut up shop? Blankets would be cheaper in proportion and the Government would get revenue from the importation of them.

No one familiar with the South, with its people, with its soil, climate and commerce, says the Courier-Journal, has failed to note on every hand evidences of increasing wealth. The recovery was slow, because the devastation of war was terrific. The upbuilding of the South had to begin from the very foundations. Barns, dwellings and fences had to be rebuilt; exhausted soils had to be enriched; farming tools and machinery had to be obtained, and stock of all kinds had to be purchased. This work was done silently, but it was well done. To-day the South is richer in all things necessary to great production than it has been at any time before in all its history. There is much yet to be done, but what under adverse circumstances has been accomplished insures years of continued prosperity for the Southern States.

Especially noticeable has been the rapid growth of Southern manufacturing enterprises. This has come about in the natural order of things, and it is a strong and healthful growth. The South makes first what it needs most and can save most in making, and labor and capital have not been diverted from their legitimate channels into artificial ones by the protective tariff. As the South has to compete with a subsidized New England, it has virtually no protection. The tariff injures it in every way, enhancing the cost of living, of new materials and of machinery, and secures to us no compensative advantages. The South should now see that the tariff is reduced to a revenue basis.

IN 1870, THE Radicals, then in possession of the State government, spent $1,117,160.44 of the people's money, taken from them by taxation, in running the State government. This great amount was used for current expenses; not a dollar of it was applied to any improvement. In 1880, the Democrats in possession, the total expenditure is less than half a million, little more than one-third of what was paid away in 1870. And of this small sum, nearly one-half is for works of State improvement; $30,000 for the Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley Railroad; $85,000 for the Western North Carolina Railroad, $55,000 for the Western, Oxford and Goldsboro Asylums. This is good government, but it is not the best service the people have had from the Democracy. The greater burden of taxation was in the several counties, where ignorance and rascality had full sway. The change in the system of county government has changed all that, and county debts have been paid, county taxes lightened, and peace and good order restored.

WE THOUGHT that we had touched bottom in the matter of mail service, that it was impossible to be worse than it was when we came here four years ago. But facilis descensus Averni (if we could only be sure the Postoffice Department had started there!), and the service has steadily traveled that downward track. Raleigh seems now to be cut off from the Northern mail that has lately come to it at 8 p. m., by the Raleigh & Gaston Railroad, and was valuable in that it brought the Baltimore Sun on its day of issue. The Sun was useful, apart from its being a good paper, in that it brought much news more fully, more intelligently, and often more speedily, than the telegraph does to these parts.

NORTH CAROLINA had quite a good School Fund before the war. What was left of it after the war, $600,000 of Railroad stock, was sold and invested in Special Tax Bonds and "went up" as high as the bonds went down. The Democracy are building up another Fund, and have already nearly $100,000 invested in United States Bonds.

FAYETTEVILLE NOTES:—

Fayetteville, August 10, 1880.—The meeting to elect delegates to our county (Judicial) Convention was held last evening. Two tickets (ten delegates each) were proposed, one for B. Fuller, Esq., the other in favor of Major James C. McRae. It was a full meeting, and much interest was manifested. A vote being taken, resulted in the election of the McRae delegates by two to one.

The McRae ticket, headed by Major Charles Haigh, received 154 votes. The Fuller ticket, headed by Charles Glover, 85 votes.

The Convention will assemble here on Saturday, the 4th inst.; we can then tell exactly how things stand in the county. The indications are, that Mr. McRae will not vary from the above vote. Both are good and true men.

The Wilmington Star says that "Messrs. J. D. McRae and Isaac Bates have, on their 'Belvidere' plantation, in Brunswick county, one of the finest crops of corn we have ever seen in this section. They have 700 acres planted, and a fair estimate places the average yield per acre at fifty bushels. These progressive farmers have also about 130 acres in rice, the greater part of which promises a fine yield."

Cape Fear Politics.

[Correspondence of THE RALEIGH NEWS.]

WILMINGTON, August 10, 1880.

EDITOR NEWS:—In my letter of last week I neglected to mention that Judge Fowle, Gen. J. M. Leach and Fabius H. Busbee, Esq., were among the prominent speakers who are to address our grand Democratic ratification meeting on the 24th of this month. Your correspondent also learns that D. H. McLean, Esq., Presidential Elector for the Third District, has also signified to the Executive Committee his intention of being present, and will no doubt accommodate us with an excellent speech.

The Wilmington & Weldon, Wilmington, Columbia and Augusta, Carolina Central Railroads, and the Wilmington and Fayetteville Transportation Company have all agreed to charge only one fare both ways, and it is estimated that there will be at the very lowest calculation 5,000 visitors in attendance.

Hancock and English Clubs throughout the State are respectively invited and it is the especial request of the Committee that they come in organization and prepared to take part in the grand torchlight procession.

The Hancock, English and Shackelford Club, composed of the juvenile Democrats of this place, number upwards of one hundred members and is already making preparations to do some valuable service during the canvass. They have ordered one hundred campaign lamps of a new and improved pattern, also one hundred transparencies on which will be seen the life-like portraits of Hancock and English. In addition to this club we have one from each ward who are likewise laboring with energy, securing funds and perchasing campaign supplies.

It is a great disappointment indeed to the friends of Col. Waddell, that he is unable to be with us, but we can willingly relinquish his services, knowing that he can be of far more value, canvassing for the Democracy in the Radical State of Vermont. E. A. O.

The Good Templars.

[Correspondence of THE RALEIGH NEWS.]

GRAHAM, N. C., August 11.

EDITOR NEWS:—The Grand Lodge of Good Templars for North Carolina met in the hall of Graham Lodge this morning, at 10 o'clock, with 50 delegates and about 25 visitors. The following officers were present:

G. W. C. T.—T. C. Williams.
G. W. Counsellor—J. C. Ellington.
G. W. V. T.—Mrs. M. E. Shotwell.
P. G. W. C. T.—N. B. Broughton.
G. W. Chap.—Mr. Gibson.
G. W. Sec.—V. Ballard.
Assistant Sec.—Thos. Hampson.
G. W. Treas.—Mrs. E. C. Beckwith.
G. W. Marshal—Rev. J. T. Kendall.
Inside Guard—J. F. Lyttle.

The reports of the Grand Worthy Chief Templar and Grand Worthy Secretary showed that during the past year 27 Lodges had been organized; the indebtedness of the Grand Lodge, so long a barrier to the progress of the order, had all been met, or would be within the next 30 days, and the general outlook favorable. The G. W. C. T. urged the employment of one or more lecturers during the coming year, and the organization of a dual Grand Lodge. He also recommended that we petition the next Legislature for a Civil Damage Law.

In the afternoon the Committee on the State of the Order reported a resolution referring with favorable recommendation the employment of lecturers to the Executive Committee for action, which, after some discussion, was adopted.

The special committee, to whom was referred matters relating to the Friend and Templar, recommended that the Grand Lodge subscribe for one copy of the paper for every Lodge now in existence, and those that may be organized. Finally, the recommendation was adopted, and the Secretary directed to subscribe for the paper for each Lodge, requiring the same to be kept on file in the Lodge room.

At night a large audience assembled in the Baptist Church, and was addressed by N. B. Broughton.

CASWELL'S POLITICS AND CROPS:—

Caswell county, August 9.—The Republicans have had their convention, to nominate county candidates. Wils Carey is snubbed, and poor Tom Harrison, who has been a mere speck, is a speck no longer. Bigelow takes the place as candidate for the Legislature, in place of Carey, and no reason can be assigned, except Bigelow is a mulatto, a little nearer white, and the niggers evidently are tired of niggers, and Carey is what he terms a "negro." John Barnwell is the white man who takes the place of Harrison on the ticket. Barnwell is ignorant and innocent; once was elected commissioner by the negroes, but was never re-elected. Bas. S. Graves, the present Sheriff, a good Democrat, was nominated, and Maj. Jeff. Brown, the present incumbent, a brother of the old war horse Bedford, was nominated for Register of Deeds.

The Democrats hold their convention on the fourth Saturday in August, and, according to the present organization of the party, no doubt representative and working men will be selected. Caswell will try to redeem herself, and be no longer classed as a certain Republican county.

The late heavy and continuous rains have done considerable injury to the crop of tobacco, and corn on the bottom and creek flats, which could not have been much better, has been somewhat damaged. Tobacco in its growing state needs but little rain, an occasional shower is all that is necessary. Exceeding wet causes cessation of growth, and frequently kills. The crop, with the most favorable season hence, will be late, and not an average.

Sidney L. Stephens was shot accidentally, it is said, a few days ago in Yanceyville. The gun was loaded with shot, one shot taking effect just below the eye on the nose. It was so deep the doctors declined to probe for it, thinking the probing would endanger the eye. Stephens is deputy sheriff, and was in the act of delivering Nat Powell into the hands of the jailer when the gun was discharged in the hand of Solomon Corbett. Corbett did not, after the shot, see Stephens, but it is said he was shooting at a cow. The prisoner had a shot or two, and the deputy's horse was badly shot, so much so as to disable him. Here's a chance shot that may afford a chance shot for the lawyers. T.

Tariff Reform.

[From the Louisville Courier-Journal.]

Tariff revision is needed, and we must have it. Reduce duties, repeal the shipping laws, and we shall have a revival of foreign trade and a revival of ship building. The present tariff has brought about an overexpenditure of capital in certain industries, and periodical overproduction and a glut of skilled labor and products. It has brought about labor riots and other labor disturbances through the uncertainty of wages; it has thrown thousands of workingmen out of employment; it has given them generally low wages, and where wages are high the tax for the benefit of the protected sects is so high that the workingman derives no benefit from the higher wages. The laboring people suffer most from the protective tariff. The history of the last twenty years shows this and demonstrates that the inevitable concomitants of tariff extortion are low wages, strikes, antagonism between capital and labor, overstocked markets, closed factories.

With and Without Water.

[Dr. David Ferrier.]

An animal would live twice as long with water as without, but how long a person will last under similar circumstances is a matter of constitution. In case of the shipwreck of the Jane Loudor one man survived without food or water eleven days, another twelve, another fourteen, two fifteen, one eighteen, and Capt. Casey himself, who recovered, twenty-eight days, and this under the depression and fear consequent on the wreck, showing that it is a question of constitution. There are innumerable cases of the kind. One man survived eighteen days in a coal mine without food, but had water the first ten days. As a rule, from ten days to a fortnight is the period for death to supervene in cases of acute starvation, though in chronic starvation it is extended to the extreme limit of two months. Ordinarily a person would die of starvation, whether with water or not, at the end of a fortnight, though there are many exceptional cases, and among these Tanner must be reckoned—if it is certain that he has not been having food.

Postoffice Matters.

[New York Times.]

An actual count was made throughout the United States, in November last, of the number of letters, postal cards, newspapers, &c., which passed through the mails in the course of seven days. By the somewhat crude method of multiplying the various items of the tabulated result by 52, an approximate idea has been obtained of the volume of a year's business. In round numbers, this is found to consist of eight hundred and sixty-eight millions of letters, two hundred and seventy-six millions of postal cards, six hundred and ninety-five millions of newspapers, and three hundred millions of books, circulars, and miscellaneous printed matter, not taking into account magazines and articles of merchandise. Statistics of the postal business of Great Britain and Ireland, which are probably the result of more exact methods, show an annual total of one billion and seventy-eight millions of letters, one hundred and two millions of postal cards, and a combined total for newspapers and book packages of three hundred and eighteen millions. Our relative inferiority in the matter of letters is strongly contrasted with the enormous superiority in the number of postal cards, and the still greater superiority in the number of newspapers which pass through the United States mails.

A Cold Romance.

[From the Philadelphia Times.]

At the head of the army of plucky maidens who know it is leap year may be inscribed the name of Sister Smith. There are many Smiths, but this particular one is the belle of a Hudson river village and is so pretty and so rich that she can do very much as she pleases. Having rejected half the young men of the neighborhood, who loved the very ground she trod on, or at least as much of it as she owned, this beauty went to the country store of a neighboring village and saw in the window a mild young man polishing up the big pane of glass. He polished up the panes so skilfully that she was attracted to him. Bashful fellow that he was he blushed and blushed and blushed again, and then kept on blushing several times more, while she, regarding him as a piece of automatic goods on exhibition, surveyed him as closely as if he were a camel's hair shawl with the name of the camel marked all over it. Then she went in and when the proprietor asked what she would buy, she said she wanted nothing but that young man and that she would give two dishes of ice cream for him. One dish of the cold confection being given to the store-man and another to the youth, the bargain was sealed and in a few hours she called with her carriage to take him away. It might be supposed that, having bought and paid for this piece of goods she would drive it immediately to the parson or the justice of the peace and have it made one with herself. With all her precipitation there was yet a little prudence in the mind of this whimsical maiden. Instead of marrying the man at once she took him to her home in the country to court him and see what he might prove to be like. The courtship is reported as progressing hopefully, for the young man says he will measure calico and weigh bacon and count out molasses and mackerel and mustard and mosquito-nets no more. He talks of engagement rings and wedding suits, and is satisfied that Sister Smith's purchase was a good and wise one, even if the pay was small. He has got a good situation, and that is what a great many of his fellows would like to have.

Daisy.

Could you have seen the violets
That blossomed in her eyes,
Could you have kissed that golden hair
And drank her baby sighs,
You would have been her tiring maid
As joyfully as I;
Content to deck your little queen
And let the world go by.

Could you have seen those violets
Hide in their graves of snow,
Drawn all that gold along your hand
While she lay, smiling so,
You would tread this weary earth
As heavily as I;
Content to clasp her little grave
And let the world go by.

Our Cow.

[From the Detroit Free Press.]

It was agreed, as we lived in the country, that a cow was necessary. What is home without a bovine, especially if no milkman's morning bell resounds in the neighborhood? It was also agreed that our cow should be a genuine country cow, one that had not the deceitful ways of the city animal who generally gives skim milk; so our cow was bought sixty miles away, and appropriately enough she took steer-age passage in a steamer to get here. The wharf is about a quarter of a mile from the house and I stood there with two or three of my neighbors who had kindly offered to help me home with the cow. As the steamer rounded to, I noticed that the cow had the whole lower deck to herself and that there were guy ropes from every tiable portion of her to stationary articles on board.

The passengers on the upper deck had a pleased expectant look on their faces as if there was something enjoyable ahead. When the gangway plank was run out the deck hands seemed reluctant to interfere with the cow. The captain came down from the for'ard stairs and shouted:

"Let go her head line, slack up aft."

"Aye, aye, sir," cried the sailors, and the command was obeyed.

"Get a line out in front."

One of the sailors took the original farm rope that was around her horns and got out on the deck.

All the other lines were now removed, and as the cow began to look steadily at the fellow out on the wharf, pulling on the rope, he began to tremble.

"Port her a little, and send her for'ard," said the captain.

"Port it is, sir," answered one of the hands, as he approached the animal with a club to induce her to port.

Our cow had stood like a statue all the while, glaring at the man on the wharf. Now she made one wide wave of her horns in the direction of the club person. He rapidly tumbled over two barrels, and sprang on a dry goods box, while the cow stood triumphant over the club.

A murmur of approbation came from the passengers, who were peering down the stairways, while the boldest were perched up on inaccessible articles of freight.

"Can I be of any service," I mildly asked the captain.

"Well, yes," said he. "If you could go and get a good serviceable coroner, you would do us a favor; I think we'll need one."

Meanwhile the passengers were showing how the cow could easily be got out, but none of them came down to put their theories into practice.

"Make fast your head line," called the captain to the man on the wharf. He gave the rope a couple of rapid turns around a projecting timber.

"Now, all hands aft," was the next command, and the boys gathered around in the rear of the cow.

"All together, now," was the cry, and a dozen men gently shoved the reluctant cow shorewards, while the wharf man shortened the rope around the timber.

Our cow resolutely planted her four hoofs down and hung back, but the combined force of the crew was too much for her, and she slid along down the plank amid the cheers of the passengers. Suddenly she changed her mind and made a spring to the end of her rope. The wild grappling of the pushers as they went down with the most astonishing unanimity brought forth the heartfelt applause of the discriminating audience.

By this time the captain was on the upper deck ringing the boat ahead, and I could see the passengers around him coaxing him to stay and let them watch the cow sacrifice those of us that were left on the dock.

One of my near neighbors, a big, powerful young man, said that he would take home the cow for me, that steamboat men did not understand how to treat cattle anyhow, and he proceeded to unwind the rope from the timber. The wharf however, seemed to suit the cow exactly, and she refused to budge. We tried to shove her along as the steamboat men had done, but it was too big a contract. At last one of the men brought a pitchfork, and while the rope man got ready for a tornado, he touched up the cow. It was a brilliant success. Man and cow disappeared up the road in a whirlwind of dust. Everybody along the route thought it was a runaway; the women shrieked and men climbed fences. We never expected to see either cow or man again. He, however, understood his business. He let the infuriated animal drag him along until he reached the open gate, and then with one wild bound he sprang ahead and gave the rope a turn around the starboard gate post. The way that cow came round was amazing. She described a semi-circle very much quicker than Euclid could have done it. She lay there in a heap panting, and evidently wondering how it all came about.

"There's your cow," said my friend, covered with dust and triumph, as he closed the gate and flung the rope over her prostrate form; "we may be somewhat out of repair, but she's there."

The neighbors leaned over the fence and told me what they would do if they had a cow like that. The cow suddenly sprang to her feet again, and we all scattered a little. Then she ran up and down like a roaring lion seeking a part of the fence to get over, and in less than five minutes tried to jump the fence a dozen times, all the while the rope trailed behind like a comet's tail.

We didn't milk her that evening. Next morning I suggested that we might get one of the neighbors to come and milk the cow, but my father laughed at me and said that the cow would be quiet enough by this time, and that any cow was all right if you knew how to treat her.

I said I was willing to stand treat in any way, but I preferred to have somebody else milk the cow.

Again I was laughed down, and was just simpleton enough to take a pail and sally forth. Our cow stood at the very remotest corner of the field. I cried "co'boss, co'boss, co'boss," but she wouldn't "co'." She didn't seem to understand the phrase which I had been taught to believe all cows comprehended. Finding that I was making myself ridiculous without bringing the cow any nearer I started towards her. I will do her the justice to say that she met me half way, but luckily I had got over the fence in the meantime. I tried to explain to her that it was utterly senseless to act in this manner. The process of milking had to be gone through, however, disagreeable it was to both of us. It seemed as if I had convinced the animal, but the moment I went to get on her side of the fence her convictions appeared to set the other way. I oozed along my side of the fence as quietly as I could, conversing all the while in a conciliatory tone with the cow, but she steadily faced me until we were nearly opposite the house, and I began to realize that I was about to be cut off from home and family if I couldn't get rid of this cow. A brilliant idea struck me. I would get hold of the long rope that trailed behind, I climbed the fence with as little ostentation as I could and made a dash for the rope and got it. I then appreciated the conundrum, "If you had hold of a tiger's tail, would you hold on, or let go?" After the waltz had lasted a few minutes I concluded to let go, and made a break for the house, the cow making a very good second. If the kitchen door had not been open I suppose I would be looking after my insurance money instead of writing this. As it was I went clear through the kitchen into the dining-room and fell over three chairs and part of a table. My wife was excessively annoyed. She said she had been trying to get the baby asleep for the last half hour and that if I thought that way of acting was anyway funny I might take the furniture out doors and play circus out there.

"My dear," said I pathetically, "if you knew that I have just escaped from the jaws—or rather the horns—of death, you would not talk in that unfeeling manner."

Then she told me to put the pail of milk in the cellar and she would attend to it in a few moments. This was the unkindest cut of all.

"It would take," said I severely, "a man in complete triple-plated steel armor to milk that cow."

"And have you been out all this time and never milked the cow?"

"It is not a question of time, Mrs. Sharp, it is a question of whether garments are strong enough to resist those horns."

And then she made the same remark that had previously been given, that anybody could manage a cow, and I invited her out to give a practical illustration of the truth thereof. The cow was quietly standing a few rods away, and while I provided myself with an ax-handle my wife calmly approached the statuesque cow saying soothingly, "So bossy; poor boss; so-o-o-o bossy."

The cow gazed in astonishment at the new element in the problem, and it struck me that the brute would just be deceived enough to act kind of civilized like. But my fears were unfounded.

"See how docile she is."

"Don't 'holler' before you are out of the woods," said I.

"What's that?"

I said it might perhaps be preferable to postpone all congratulatory remarks until we had emerged from the forest primeval.

"Oh, I understand."

Just then the docile animal gave one short bellow and made one short jump forward.

When I entered the house my wife breathlessly remarked that it was perhaps better to get a neighbor, and I rather complacently replied that I said all along that the sacrifice of a neighbor would be necessary. So I went and told a neighbor that it was some time since I had seen a cow, and that I was somewhat out of practice, and that if he would kindly come over, etc., etc. And he kindly came. I went into the house and congratulated myself on getting that cow milked. In a few minutes my wife said a man wanted to speak to me outside. I went out and found it was our neighbor—he was on the other side of the fence.

"The pail," said he, "is at the upper end of the field. The cow is taking care of it. You can never milk that cow until the rope is taken off her horns. It hurts her now and makes her wild." And then after reflecting for a few moments he added slowly, "I suppose you can get some one to take off the rope for $15 or $20." I shall always be proud of the fact that I took that rope myself. I consider the feat a triumph of modern engineering. This is how it was done:

There is an ancient pear tree on the place that came originally from France, or at least the seed did, and it has stood the storms of a century, and cares no more for a modern cow than it does for the idle wind that it regards not. As the cow was grazing in the grateful shade of the tree I tied up discreetly, keeping the trunk of the tree between myself and the quadruped. I secured the rope and unobtrusively tied it around the trunk of the tree. I then made myself visible, and the cow at once took after me. She wound the rope round and round the tree, and each time her circle of travel narrowed until the side of her head was close up against the rough bark of the tree. She pressed eagerly forward, but the more she pressed the tighter fix she found herself in. With a sharp knife I cut the rope above her forehead and then ran for all I was worth. I escaped, although by a nigh horn took off part of the door-jamb. The rope was the secret of the trouble, however, and since then you could not wish for a milder animal than Our Cow.

No Need of One.

A seedy-looking customer who was drinking a glass of beer in a Larned street saloon yesterday and glancing from the man behind the bar to the open door as he sipped, suddenly asked:—

"Has this saloon any particular motto?"

"I guess not," was the reply.

"Most every such place always has a motto of some sort."

"Yes, I pelief so; but I haf no motto one. All der buplick understands dot dey doan' bay for vhat dey drinks I pay deir headt mit a glub, und dot answers shust as well."

The seedy drinker paid for his beer, and took his last cent to do it.

Four hundred years ago there was a would-be Tanner. In the beautiful Church of St. Mary, at Bury St. Edmunds, England, is an altar tomb surmounted by a recumbent figure of a starved man, the details of which are well executed and ghastly enough. It was erected to the memory of John Baret, who died of starvation in 1463, while attempting a fast forty days and forty nights.

Death of Colonel Harrison.

Col. William H. Harrison, formerly Mayor of Raleigh, died yesterday at 1 o'clock, of paralysis. Col. Harrison had been in failing health for four or five years, and his death was, therefore, not unexpected. He was in the 54th year of his age.

Col. Harrison was a native of Raleigh, and the second son of Robert Harrison, deceased. He was educated at the Raleigh Academy, and before he was of age, volunteered as a private in the Mexican war, and rose before the war closed to a lieutenantcy. He was a good soldier, winning commendations from his superiors, and the love of his brother soldiers.

He was many times elected Mayor of Raleigh, and at the breaking out of the war between the States in 1861, he raised a company of one hundred men who had formerly been Union men, and joined the Confederate forces at Norfolk, Va., about the time Gov. Vance went to the front at the same place. He was in the battle of Williamsburg, in Virginia, and in other minor engagements; but at the end of twelve months he resigned his position as captain, and returned to his home, when he was again elected Mayor of Raleigh. We have said he was elected Mayor on his return to Raleigh, but our recollection is that he remained Mayor during his absence, and C. B. Root, Esq., acted in his place, and with that noble generosity which is a part of his character, caused his salary, as Mayor, to be paid regularly to Col. Harrison's family.

In September, 1865, he was a candidate for the Convention in Wake county, under the Provisional State government established by President Johnson, and was elected by a large majority, leading his ticket. In that campaign he surprised and gratified his friends by the exhibition of superior powers as a public speaker.

Col. Harrison was possessed of the best traits of character. He was, in all respects, an honest and incorruptible man. No man was more affectionate than he, and the man never lived who was of more courageous mould. In him, as in the heroes of Balaklava, was realized the lines of Bayard Taylor,

"The bravest are the tenderest,
The loving are the daring."

His sense of justice was inflexible. As Mayor and Magistrate for many years he possessed the full confidence of our whole people. No man ever questioned his integrity in the performance of his official duties. He had a great many friends, who honored and confided in him in life and who now deeply deplore his loss. He leaves to his family the heritage of an honorable and spotless name.

His funeral services will take place at Edenton Street Methodist Church on Friday morning next, 13th inst., at ten o'clock.

State Pharmaceutical Association.

Pursuant to a call heretofore published for the establishment of a State Pharmaceutical Association, the druggists of this State met in convention in the Senate Chamber yesterday promptly at 11 o'clock a. m.

On motion of Dr. S. J. Hinsdale, of Fayetteville, Mr. E. M. Nadal, of Wilson, was made temporary chairman and Capt. R. B. Saunders, of Raleigh, was made temporary Secretary.

The Chairman assumed the duties of his position and called the Convention to order, when Major Manly, in his usually happy manner, welcomed the members of the Convention to the hospitality of the city.

Dr. Grissom was introduced, and on behalf of the Druggists and Physicians of the city of Raleigh addressed the Convention as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION:—In behalf of the Druggists of Raleigh, and by their request, I cordially convey to you their hearty welcome.

The occasion is one of no ordinary character which witnesses the assembling of the Pharmaceutists and Druggists of North Carolina, to lay the foundations of an organization which, it may be fondly hoped, will stand among the institutions of the State for generations to come. It has been well said that concert of purpose and action and the free comparison of ideas are essential to the interests of any great cause. When to these is added the mighty power of organization, the result is already within our grasp. It was by the magnificent machinery of organization that our Anglo-Saxon race is subduing and controlling the world.

You, gentlemen, are assembled to apply these principles of union tor success to the advancement of the interests of pharmaceutical art, and the regulation of its practice. The good to be achieved will not only inure to your own society or your profession, but will be sensibly felt by your brethren, the physicians of North Carolina, nor will its widening influence cease until it has embraced the welfare of the whole of society.

Only twenty-eight years have passed since the establishment of the first Association in this country for the elevation of pharmacy, and the protection of the druggists' art, but it would be difficult to estimate the good that has been accomplished. The rapid strides of pharmacy keep pace with the advance of abstract chemistry in the laboratory, and in twenty years past that great department of knowledge has been almost built anew, as none know better than yourselves.

When one compares the precise and reliable extracts, the delicate elixirs, and the concentrated preparations and pills of to-day, isolated from the crude mixtures and hurtful ingredients that in former years lay like dead weight upon the active principles whose virtue we sought to reach, one recognizes with pride that pharmaceutical art is abreast with the progress of the world, even though its tasks be so difficult and delicate that life and death hang upon the graduated measuring glass.

In the progress of the age, as populations gather about our thousand centres of trade and social life, the physician is glad to surrender to those who have grown expert, by the surrender of their lives to this beneficent work, the task of preparing the healing remedy which it is his portion to prescribe.

Into your hands, more and more, the responsibility must fall, of securing the due purity and efficiency of the compounds to be dispensed; their proper manipulation and conformity to a prescribed standard and strength; and with those results the success or failure, in great measure, of the medical art. Have you not an important work to perform?

To those of your body who are justly emulous of fame, what fairer field can lie before you than the development of the resources of the materia medica that your own State can boast? You do not forget that it was the very medicine chest of the surgeons of the Confederate army, when we were cut off from the armamentarium of the world during that long and gloomy struggle. The records of the office of the Medical Purveyor at Charlotte would astonish the citizens of our own Commonwealth. And the trade, yet in its infancy, which has been so splendidly developed in Western North Carolina, has a future before it of wealth to our people and blessing to mankind, whose grandeur must be left to time and the future observer.

Here, like an open book, lies before our eyes, an epitome of the flora of the United States east of the Mississippi, for we have within our borders isothermal lines of the Gulf of Mexico and the icy St. Lawrence. Here, too, is the grandest cabinet of the mineral alphabet that nature has anywhere collected in fifty thousand square miles of surface. It would be strange indeed if science did not encamp among our everlasting hills and take up her abode with the pharmacist whose house is the garden spot of the continent.

Whatever you shall accomplish in the work of the Pharmaceutical Association of North Carolina, to exalt the standing and preserve the order and dignity of your profession, will not only confer honor upon yourselves, but will redound to the comfort and security and, indeed, bring daily blessings to the whole people. In their name then, the people of the capital city of your State gladly welcome the pioneers of such a work, themen who in after years will be recorded on he historic page as the founders of this organization, and reverently regarded by gnerations of successors in a good and faiuful undertaking, and who have thus left the world better and wiser than they found it.

Once again, I bid you thrice welcome, and invoke for your efforts complete and lasting success.

NIGHT SESSION.

At 8½ o'clock the Association resumed its labors.

Mr. S. J. Hinsdale, of Fayetteville, read a very interesting paper upon the organization of Pharmaceutical Associations, and the business of drugs, and the life of a drug clerk when he was a boy 31 years ago. The paper was amusing and exceedingly interesting. He said that having been 37 years in the drug business, until the present occasion he had not made the acquaintance of over fifteen druggists in the State. In mentioning the old fashioned family remedies, he told of one he remembered particularly. It was "Ext. tarrax. one quarter of a pound; boneset, two ounces, with some carminative in half gallon of rum and water; dose, wine glass full. I suppose that was for the liver. By the way, gentlemen, the liver is intimately connected with our business; we could not do without it. If a patent liver could be invented by any of Goodyear's successors it would ruin our trade." He said the druggists depended too much on manufacturing chemists; they did not make enough of their tinctures and fluid extracts, for when made at home we know they are pure. Thanking the Association for their patience he wished for great success to the new enterprise and a large attendance at the next meeting.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the Constitution was adopted prevailed, when on motion the Executive Committee was increased from three to seven, and Messrs. F. Gallagher, of Washington, J. R. Young, of Henderson and W. C. Porter, of Greensboro were added to the Executive Committee.

The names of James Joyner, of Wadesboro, W. H. Furman, Jr., of Louisburg, John Tull, of Morganton, were added to the list of members.

On motion the Association adjourned till 10 o'clock this morning.

SUPREME COURT.—Court opened yesterday morning at 10 o'clock. All the Justices were present.

The court commenced the call of causes set for hearing at the end of the docket, and disposed of the following:

John A. Gibson vs. Southern Underwriters' Association. Continued by consent.

IN AND ABOUT THE CAPITOL.—Yesterday the convention of druggists in the Senate chamber reminded one of the Legislature, and the little groups around in different parts of the square gave hopes of an item. In the building all was dullness. Not an item to be had. As we entered the Treasury Department, Hal. Worth arose with a smile and said:

There's no news to-day,
I am sorry to say.

We appreciated Hal.'s poetry, and pursued our search. In the office of the Private Secretary, and in the Auditor's Department we found a brick-mason repairing the fire places in anticipation of the August frosts predicted by weather prophets. In the Secretary of State's office they have just completed sending out the election laws, and legal opinions were being arrived at in the Supreme Court rooms.

TO DEMOCRATIC CLUBS.—In consequence of applications for rates on THE NEWS for Campaign Clubs, we give below the prices at which the WEEKLY NEWS may be had until the election.

One hundred copies, or more, per week, mailed to one address, $2.50.

Any number less than 100, mailed to one address, at the rate of $3 per hundred.

Clubs ordering on the above terms will please state for how many weeks they wish the paper sent.

Persons desiring to form clubs for the year, are referred to our regular club rates given at the head of the first column on the first page.

FUNERAL.—The funeral of the late Capt. A. W. Lawrence was conducted by Rev E. R. Rich from Christ Church yesterday morning. A large congregation composed of relations, friends and acquaintances of the deceased were in attendance. The remains were interred in Oakwood Cemetery, the following gentlemen acting as pall-bearers: Messrs. W. S. Primrose, W. S. Mason, Johnston Busbee, W. W. Vass, John Devereux, Pulaski Cowper, Walter Clark and P. F. Pescud.

Regular weekly drill meeting of Raleigh Light Infantry to-night. A full turn out is requested.

Seaton Gales Lodge, I. O. O. F., will meet at Odd Fellow's hall to-night at 8½ o'clock.

Prayer meetings at First and Second Baptist churches at 7½ o'clock this evening.

GEO. STRONACH'S DINNER.—A happy gathering will form around the dinner table of that generous and popular planter, George T. Stronach, to-day. The plain and novel manner in which the invitations are extended, followed by the bountifully, we might say extravagantly furnished board, renders it almost impossible for one to decline to put in his appearance on these occasions. There are none who know better how to entertain a large gathering than Mr. Stronach.

DIED.—Mrs. M. E. Whitaker, wife of Rev. R. H. Whitaker, editor and publisher of the Friend and Templar of this city, departed this life yesterday morning at the residence of her husband, on Person street. Funeral will take place from the residence at 4 o'clock this evening.

NEWBERN, August 10, 1880.

EDITOR NEWS:—Will you please publish the enclosed letter and much oblige,

Yours truly,
C. W. McLEAN.

An Open Letter to His Excellency, Gov. Jarvis:

NEWBERN, August 10, 1880.

Hon. Thomas J. Jarvis:

DEAR SIR:—As I understand that the offer of Mr. Lazarus Silverman, of Chicago, made through me in July last, to lease the Atlantic & North Carolina Railroad for the sum of $35,000 for the term of thirty years, was not considered by some members of the committee as a bona fide bid, I take this way of informing the people of North Carolina, through you, that it was made in good faith; and that Mr. Silverman proposes, should his bid be taken, to deposit in the hands of the Treasurer of the State, ample securities for the annual payment of the lease money.

There is, among the influential and wealthy Hebrews of Europe and the United States, a movement for the relief of the Hebrew peasantry of Roumania, who are not allowed to hold land in that country, but only to till it for the Russian owners. Baron Rothschild is at the head of this movement, and a million of dollars has already been deposited for the purpose of removing these men and their families, and settling them in the United States. The plan is to buy lands for them in different localities, purchase stock and farming implements, and give them ten years to pay for the same; they pledging themselves not to engage in trade, beyond the sale of their own produce and manufactures; the object being to elevate the race from mere hewers of wood and drawers of water into producers. Mr. Silverman's attention having been drawn by me to this section of the country, and one of our mutual friends, a gentleman of wealth and standing in Chicago, having visited North Carolina and reported favorably of the advantages of this particular location, he had almost determined to purchase land in Wayne, Lenoir, Craven, Carteret and Jones counties and begin at once to bring out settlers. But, hearing of the proposed lease of the Atlantic & North Carolina Railroad, he felt it would not be well to locate on its line, should it pass into the hands of the Wilmington & Weldon Railroad Company, whose interest it will be to close our port of Morehead, at which point he proposed to land his colonists from steamers direct from Europe.

The interest of my colony at Havelock being identical with his I induced him to make this bid for the Railroad, believing that if the people of North Carolina could fully realize the extent of this movement they would not allow so magnificent an opportunity for developing the resources of the State to slip from them. The fact that Baron Rothschild and his associates are willing to expend a million of dollars in this State would of itself be an advertisement of its merits to the whole civilized world, which would end in the settlement of every acre of the State land. So that although Mr. Silverman is willing to give more for the Road than the Wilmington & Weldon Railroad Company offers, the State could in reality well afford to give her interest in it to him and his associates. My friends will be at the meeting on the 16th of September prepared, not only to renew their bid, but to deposit their securities. It is thought by some that the Wilmington & Weldon Railroad Company will be able to lease the road at less than Mr. Silverman offers; but I ask you, sir, if the property-owners at Morehead, Beaufort, and along the line of the Road will quietly submit to see the Atlantic & North Carolina Railroad put into the hands of a monopoly? Or if they are so blind to their own interest, will the people of the State at large be? The battle-cry of those who favor leasing to the Wilmington & Weldon Railroad Company has been that the Atlantic & North Carolina Railroad will be sold out at the end of eight years to the bondholders. My friends will, if it is desired, extend these bonds to the end of their lease, which ought to remove all fear of such a sale from the minds of the people. Very respectfully yours,

C. W. McLEAN.

COMPLIMENTARY.—We were pleased to know that Frank H. Heartt, our very popular druggist opposite the market, received the very flattering compliment of being placed in nomination for the important position of Treasurer of the State Pharmaceutical Association. He declined the nomination.

RECRUITS.—Moore county, by her Sheriff, added three delegates for work on the Western North Carolina Railroad yesterday by presenting them at the office of the penitentiary. They were, Charles Hodges, Bill Blue and William Barrett, all colored, and their credentials run from one to ten years.

STATE POLITICAL NOTES:—

Julius A. Gray, Esq., prints a card in the Greensboro Patriot, declining to be a candidate for Senator from Alamance and Guilford. He thinks he can serve the State better by building the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley Railroad

GENERAL NEWS ITEMS:—

The location of the Virginia Midland Railroad extension has been completed from Statesville, N. C., to the Virginia line, and it is announced that the right of way has been given along the whole route, the people being exceedingly anxious for the extension of the road. The road located is said to be of easy grades.

Insanity is on the increase in Massachusetts. Two new insane asylums have had to be built during the last three years, and there is a loud call, already, for another establishment. The insane are chiefly found among the ever-increasing pauper population of the State, in the cities and towns.

The trustees of the Cincinnati Southern Railroad have determined to lease the road to some company for a long term of years. As bidders will not be restricted to home companies, sharp competition may be expected. The road has cost the city of Cincinnati about $20,000,000, and at least one million more is required to put it in condition for a large business.

NEW ENGLAND'S WO.

Scarcity of Young Men in Nantucket.

[Burlington Hawkeye.]

"One evening, I don't remember when, I introduced a young friend of mine, and he is very young and very bashful, Mr. Julian C. Elginbrod, of Buffalo, to a young lady acquaintance. After a few moments of society chatter, he suggested the ice-cream saloon. Then she arose and introduced him to her two school-girl friends, her mother, the mother of one of her friends, and an aunt who was visiting them. Then the aunt introduced him to her elder sister and an old lady who was not a relative, they explained, but was as dear to them as their own mother. Then they all said in a general sort of way, 'Well, are you all ready?' and answered themselves in the affirmative, as they slowly followed the horror-stricken young man to the door, and the procession filed off down street toward the ice-cream saloon, stopping on the way at a house to pick up the old lady's daughter, and calling at a store for the twin cousins of one of the aunts—beautiful girls they were—from Springfield. I watched the column when it swung by 'fours, right into line,' in front of the ice cream saloon, where it formed like a line of men at a railway ticket office, the old lady smilingly and patiently bringing up the rear, standing under the flickering gas-light and the steadfast stars, awaiting her chance at the frozen pudding. It was far, far in the summer night when Julian Elginbrod returned to the hotel, and when I looked out of the window and saw his pallid face and glittering eyes, and noted the club in one hand and the revolver in the other, and heard him mention my name and ask the night clerk what was the number of my room, I feared that he might feel harshly toward me, and I barricaded the door of my room with the lounge, the bedstead, the stove and the trunk, just before he came banging against it. He slept in the hall that night, across my threshold, and I only escaped the next afternoon, when the landlord, weary of his incessant pounding of my door panels with his club, had him arrested as a dangerous lunatic."
